

Biography

Kim Sarrasin is an entrepreneur, speaker, coach, seminar leader and expert at educating men and women about how to relate with each other. For the past 11 years Kim has led seminars across Canada and the United States delivering her simple yet profound message. As founder and President of Life Cycles Relationship Seminars Ltd, her mission is to eliminate the frustration that single men and women experience in their dating life and provide practical tools and information that demonstrate how easy it is to have extraordinary relating.

After years of struggling and not understanding how to get her own needs met in her relationships, Kim went on a personal quest determined to uncover the mystery that was eluding her - how to have a fun and fulfilling dating life. Kim immersed herself in studying the dynamic between the sexes, spending several years involved in personal development seminars and training with many experts in the industry. What came out of her research and training was nothing short of a miracle. Not only did she experience huge success with her own relationships, she discovered her unique ability to quickly assess other peoples dating challenges and help them achieve immediate results.

With the success of her Dating & Relating Weekend Workshops, teleseminars and coaching programs, Kim continues to develop new programs and information products to reach a wider audience and is currently writing her first book.

Kim lives in a beautiful home overlooking the ocean in Vancouver BC where she runs her seminar business and private coaching practice.
